Course Description:

What do we know to be true about differentiated instruction? Differentiation doesn't begin only when planning, it is a constant process adjusted based on the data you collect throughout your instruction. Teachers work hard to ensure all their students are learning by meeting them where they are. This can seem time consuming and at somewhat difficult, but there are ways to work efficiently to provide structure, scaffolding, and strategies to students in need. How do we do this as educators? In this course, we will discover data driven strategies that you can implement immediately into your lessons and your classroom.
